Revitalize – it’s our theme for this year. Individually and collectively, we in the Evangelical Free Church recognize our need for the Lord to renew our hearts so that we become a gospel-sharing people again. Our coming to faith hinged on someone, at some point in time, sharing the good news of Jesus with us.

In the book Total Church: A Radical Reshaping around Gospel and Community, we are told that “the gospel is a word; so the church must be word-centered.” The gospel is the most amazing, life-transforming message that this world has ever and will ever encounter. Jesus’ death paid for our sin-debt against a holy God. And when we confess our sins, repent and accept His death as payment for our sins, we are able to enter into relationship with God – free from the condemning power and penalty of sin. Jesus gives us His righteousness and takes our sins – what an amazing, God-ordained transaction! We are free to enjoy God and one another in ways that we never could have before!

Our North American culture needs that message. We are blind to our soul-sickness and to the reality of God’s provision, granted to us in the person of Jesus. But the message is not all our culture needs.

Tim Chester and Steve Timmis, authors of Total Church, go on to add that the gospel is also “a missionary word; so the church must be mission-centered”(p.32). And again, we know this! But the challenge is that it’s easier for us to be recipients of the good news than proclaimers of it. We are gospel gluttons, forever receiving more of that good news, longing for greater and greater blessings to flow into us, but seemingly unwilling to release that message to a Jesus-starved culture.

Chester and Timmis tell this story: “A woman once told me about the difficulties she faced as a Brit fitting into American culture. One of her struggles was with people who said, ‘let’s do lunch.’ She expected them to phone and arrange a date. They never did. ‘Let’s do lunch’ was just an idiomatic way of saying farewell. We all say, ‘let’s do mission’ but does it carry any more intent than ‘let’s do lunch?’”

If we truly want to experience revitalization and become who God, through Christ, enables us to be, then the gospel message and gospel mission need to become one again. If we take up the call of Christ to go into all the world with the gospel, where would we be willing to go? To work? To the gym? To lunch?

Let’s pray together that the Holy Spirit would refresh us all with His strength, His courage and His resolve to make known the good news of Jesus, wherever we are and wherever we go – for God’s glory, our good and the world’s need.
